Undertakers—The Best Ambulance Service

Seven Million Workers Need Training.

Washington, D. C., June 17.—That 7,000,000 of the 10,000,000 industrial workers in this country are handicapped by lack of adequate opportunities for self-improvement is the statement of the director of the U. S. training service of the department of labor, based on investigations made in a large number of typical manufacturing plants and on personal interview with manufacturers, shop superintendents and foremen.

Modern industry has developed many important lines of manufacture of such limited skill that no apprenticeships have been instituted for them. In the skilled lines apprenticeships are haphazardly conducted. In most lines of production where there is no apprenticeship adequate training is wholly lacking and so employers and employees are at a great disadvantage.

It is to overcome this needless burden on American production that training courses in plants are advocated by the training service. To back up its claim that this method of fitting men for their jobs is profitable, the service exhibits a number of charts showing the transformation wrought in workers who were sent through training departments. These show that on the average the new employee learns his new work in about half the time formerly required and that old employees of mediocre skill, or less, can be "upgraded" to equal some of the best. Others are fitted for promotion by training.

Not only is the average production raised by the introduction of training but labor turnover is reduced and spoilage is much less. The factories having training departments find that in most cases they are self-supporting.

Harry Clark of Granitville was preparing to-day to leave for Mt. Clemens, Mich., where he will be treated for rheumatism, which has caused him considerable suffering of late.

Misses Rosa Broginni and Caroline, both of Somerville, Mass., relatives of Mrs. N. Vanetti of Central street, left for their homes this morning, having passed two weeks in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Drown and two sons returned yesterday from Lyndonville, where they attended the funeral of Mr. Drown's mother, Mrs. A. O. Drown, who died at her home Saturday.

Miss Eva O'Dell of Beckley Hill and her cousin, Miss Connie Tansley of Bridgeport, Conn., who is her guest for two weeks, went to West Haven this morning to spend two or three days with Miss O'Dell's sister, Mrs. Carl Burr. Mrs. Josephine Eden and two children of Bridgeport, Conn., are also passing a vacation at the home of C. W. O'Dell on Beckley Hill.

A very quiet wedding took place at the office of Justice of the Peace A. A. Sargent Monday afternoon when Frederick Alton Forrest and Mrs. Martha E. (Maynard) Chandler, both of Walden, were united in marriage. They were unattended and the couple left soon for their home in Walden. The groom is employed as a railroad carpenter and has lived a number of years in Walden.

Paul W. Waterman, a teacher in Montclair, N. J., academy, arrived in Barre with his family last evening to visit at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Waterman, for a short time. Mr. Waterman plans to spend the greater part of the summer attending summer school at Columbia university in New York, while his family will remain in Barre and vicinity.

Harry Levin, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Levin of Merchant street, has opened a gent's furnishing business in Salem, Mass., and, according to a letter received yesterday by his parents, had a very successful opening day last Saturday. He has a central location and a well adapted store, so expects a thriving business in the future. He has had a wide experience in this kind of business. He enters with the best wishes for success from his many Barre friends.

Perley Haskett, who until recently has been employed in Bethel, and George Bartlett, both of whom are discharged soldiers, located employment through George N. Tilden, local United States employment agent. This morning they started for Wells River where, together with several other Barre men, they will assist in fighting a warfare against a summer pine tree insect. These two men were secured after Harold Bailey of Bradford, one of the state foresters, had inquired from the local service agent for two more men. Of the ten placements for young men out of employment last week made by Mr. Tilden, seven were of discharged soldiers. It has been the common belief that since the U. S. employment office has been closed the work has been discontinued, but such is not the case, and many of the soldiers who have made applications for work have been rewarded with a job.

Only the immediate relatives on both sides attended the wedding of Miss Christian R. Melvin to Elmer A. Cummings on June 9 at the Congregational parsonage in Jackson, Mich. Rev. Bastian Smith performing the single ring service. After the ceremony the guests returned to the home of the bride's two sisters, Mrs. A. Robertson and Mrs. William Masson of 211 East Biddle street, for a wedding luncheon. The bride was attired in a pale blue georgette crepe dress, with picture hat to match, and carried white bride's roses, while the bridesmaid, Miss Eugenie Wilkinson of Detroit, Mich., wore a gown of tan, carrying red roses. The groom was attended by his brother, Leon Cummings. The couple are spending their honeymoon at Coldwater Lake, Mich. The bride wore a traveling suit of dark blue serge, with hat to match. Many wedding presents were received by the couple, including linen, china and cut glass. The bride's three sisters, including Mrs. Lawrence Wilson, reside in Jackson and are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. William B. Melvin, 16 Pleasant street, and formerly resided in Barre.

A Barre Man's Plan Commended.

In an interesting article on "Getting the People to Believe in Your Bank," written by J. Stanley Bailey in the June number of the Bankers' Monthly, the plan adopted by the Peoples National bank of Barre for an advertising campaign in The Times is given. The article says: "An interesting example of how a so-called country bank in Vermont—a national bank by the way—has advanced its commercial facilities should suggest helpful ideas to other bankers in gaining public confidence and creating new business both in the commercial and savings departments. This particular bank, the Peoples National bank of Barre, Vt., ran a series of newspaper displays of an informative character that gained quick public attention. This series is one of the best specimens of reason why copy as applied to the small national bank that has appeared in a long time. In each display the bank presented a reason for using the copy in an attractive little box in the upper left hand corner of the display—'Why We Advertise National Bank Protection for Your Savings.' When W. C. Johnson, Jr., cashier of the bank, decided to write the series of advertisements he selected several interesting topics in relation to national bank functions, as shown in the accompanying display. Mr. Johnson had clearly in mind a fact that a great many bankers seem to overlook—the ignorance of the public concerning even some of the most elemental functions of the bank. These very functions, however, can usually be made the basis of a chatty and inspirational talk that is certain to enlighten the public concerning the powers and privileges of the national bank. It is interesting to note how, in the accompanying illustration, the surplus fund is explained and again, how the importance of the national bank examination is emphasized. Throughout the series, topics of this kind were considered, in order to impress upon the public the safeguards that are thrown about the operations of the national bank. This helped to clinch the argument that the national bank offers attractive inducements to the savings depositor."

PAID GOVERNMENT PUBLICITY.
United States Is Initiating a New Policy in Advertising.

An important departure is taken by the publicity bureau of the United States army recruiting service. That bureau will place this week and next in daily newspapers published where there are recruiting stations, large display advertisements to stimulate recruiting. The first of these advertisements appears to-day in The Republican and other papers. The departure consists in the fact that the government has not in the past spent money for such advertising. There are arguments both for and against the practice. On the one hand, the practical commercial value of advertising stands to-day upon a fully attested basis; advertising has become a business science, both in this country and in Great Britain; the experiences of the war have furnished new evidence of the degree to which the interest of the public may be enlisted to great practical effect through the medium of newspaper advertising. On the other hand, it is obvious that if the government is to become an advertiser on a large scale and to exercise the right of selection which would properly be exercised by any private concern, there must be difficulties unless the government's business should be turned over to some recognized agency with instructions to proceed as in an ordinary transaction. In the present instance it is stated that the intention is to advertise in all papers published in the recruiting centers.—Springfield Republican.

Things Seen at Berlin Pond.

A Montpelier citizen who was at Berlin pond said he saw fishermen sitting in their boats with their bare feet dangling in the water. He also said they were washing their feet. He said he could pick up five bushels of dead perch, bull pout and other fish about the shores of the pond. The watchman at the pond frequently reports picking up dead fish on the shores.—Item in Montpelier Argus.
